"AMERICA IS UNDER ATTACK BY MARXIST POLITICAL WARFARE" MEET H.G. GOERNER, FOUNDER OF EPAC, AND AUTHOR OF: UNITED STATES SOCIALIST REPUBLIC

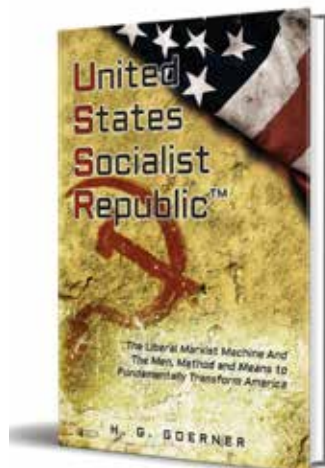

Join us on October 11, 2022, (Lunch Meeting) to hear from H.G. Goerner, author, former Appointed Public Official, Conservative, Patriot and Founder of EPAC...Ensure the Preservation of America and Our Constitution. Mr. Goerner, states.... "America is under attack by Marxist political warfare. The end goal is the "fundamental" transformation of our country to a Marxist/ Communist ideology where the State is god and you have no individual rights or freedom". In response to this destructive ideology,

Mr. Goerner created the EPAC organization, to warn Americans about this threat, help people understand tactics and strategy of the Marxist political warfare, and empower citizens to stand up and stop this attempt to fundamentally transform the American way of life. EPAC's goal is the preservation of America and the primary document that opposed Marxism and ensures out liberty: the United States Constitution.

Mr. Goerner's book* is endorsed by Stephen Coughlin, Army (retired), DOD Intelligence Analyst. Mr. Coughlin states:" Today, Hugo Goerner writes of the transformation of media to propaganda and the repurposing of our children's education to indoctrination. It is also a warning.... The Left created the "WOKE" culture...and more than just the impressionable minds of the young have been woken. For concerned American's, Goerner's United States Sociality Republic is a good place for parents and citizens getting woken up to the threat that confronts America."

*Books will be available for purchase and signature by H.G. Goerner. $25 Charge or exact cash.

Republican Candidates who are available will be in attendance at the October 11, 2022 Meeting. Watch for Candidate Updates and Proposition Updates in the October Trunkline Newsletter and in EMAIL Notifications.

History/Election Day

Joanna Wullschleger

1. On January 7, 1789, the electors were chosen for the first US President, George Washington.
2. Election Day is not a Federal Holiday; however, many states declare it a civic holiday.
3. President Ronald Reagan received the most electoral votes; a whopping 525 out of 538!
4. Election day is held the first Tuesday in November. This year that date is November 8, 2022.
5. We will receive our ballots on October 8, 2022.

PART 2: NOVEMBER 8, 2022 ELECTION BALLOT MEASURES

All Amendments to the California Constitution must be placed on the Ballot where voters will vote for or against the Amendment. The following Amendments/Ballot Measures will be on the November 8, 2022 ballot:

Proposition 29: Requires on-site Licensed Medical Professional at kidney dialysis clinics and establishes other State requirements. It's an election year, which means voting on kidney dialysis....again. For the third time, SEIU-UHW is looking to regulate dialysis companies. The proposition would increase state and local government costs between $229 million and $445 million. Prop 29 is supported by the Service Employees International Union-United Healthcare Workers West, and opposed by the Stop Yes another Dangerous Dialysis Proposition, a coalition PAC of doctors, nurses' dialysis patients, caregivers, and dialysis corporations. VOTE NO

Proposition 30: Environmentalists and Lyft teamed up, with Lyft providing most of the money to fund zero-emission vehicle infrastructure and to a lesser extent, wildfire prevention by raising rich people's income taxes. Tax on Income above $2 million would increase by 1.75% for Zero-Emissions Vehicles and Wildfire Prevention. Revenue would be dedicated to zero-emissions vehicles subsidies; zero-emission vehicle infrastructure, such as electric vehicle charging stations, and wild fire suppression and prevention programs. This would be in addition to the current tax rate of 13.3% and would take effect on January 1, 2023. Those in support include the CA State Association of Electrical Workers and CA Environmental Voters. Governor Newsom, the CA Teachers Association and the Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association, have opposed Prop 30. VOTE NO

Proposition 31: The tobacco industry's referendum to dissolve a law (Senate Bill 793) banning flavored tobacco. SB 793, signed into law 8/28/20, banned the sale of flavored tobacco products and tobacco product flavor enhancers, with exceptions for hookah tobacco, loose leaf tobacco and premium cigars. Retailers are being fined $250 for each sale violating the law. The CA Coalition for Fairness is campaigning for the veto referendum to repeal SB 793. R.J. Reynolds and Philip Morris have already contributed $41 million to protect their bottom lines. Former NYC Mayor Mike Bloomberg is spending to defend the law. VOTE YES

Enemy of Democracy

Nicholas Bednarski

On Biden's September 1, 2022, Nuremberg Speech

Our Presidents, contrary to their campaigns and acolytes, are not elected as Kings or even, as President Biden seemed to imply at his September 1, 2022 "Nuremberg" speech, as The Leader. We elect Presidents to faithfully enforce the laws we assent to through our elected representatives. Our President is expected to voice priorities and policies sought not via executive or bureaucratic fiat but via Congress. This is precisely why almost twice as many words were dedicated in the Constitution to describe the duties, powers, and limits of the Legislative branch as that of the Executive, and why the authors of the Federalist Papers, in explaining the meaning and intents of that Constitution, assigned the greatest powers to the Legislative branch, and the least to the Judiciary.

Their arguments in favor of ratifying the new Constitution clearly stated that the three branches of government were not "coequal" but existed with very limited powers granted by the people that allowed checks and balances amongst the branches. Our courts have long enhanced their authorities beyond those specified to become a second law making body through judgements and precedents based often on perceived need rather than persistent principle, and President Biden wants to enhance his authority via the actions of those courts. Congress benignly neglects their assigned duty over our government's purse, preferring to allow the President to risk establishing a nominal budget as a basis for bargaining amongst special interests. President Biden raised the fiscal ante with diktats of endless debt to give "free money" to the populace during and now after his unnecessary lockdown of our economy, effectively making many indentured servants of the government. Congress' time seems mostly occupied with "doing something" about the "crisis of the day". President Biden now establishes the overarching crisis of the country, which he alone can properly address, as domestic terrorism composed of political opponents, parents, and those who seek to have our laws enforced equally. Our initial bicameral system, designed to represent the people in the House and the States in the Senate, has chosen to be a pure captive of the popular vote. Our President Biden has now called only a portion of that popular vote legitimate, and states he "will not stand" for any interference in the legitimacy of that vote in our upcoming elections. Does President Biden now intend to "oversee" those elections with Federal force, as in the Reconstruction and 1960's Civil Rights periods? Maintaining incumbency for the sake of the useful powers of seniority generates a lifelong class of elitists rolling into and out of and back into government and the remoras of non-governmental organizations. President Biden claims that only his party members, "mainstream"

Republicans, and non-populist independents are worthy of such rotation. We citizens have long allowed our Congress to enhance their own recurrent electability by abdicating their powers and responsibilities to the Executive and its' self-empowered bureaucracy. Under President Biden and his Executive Orders, that bureaucracy now forms the bedrock of our government, immutable and largely immune to the wishes of the people, their elected representatives or the courts. That bureaucracy, at the behest of the Executive, now makes its own laws and fees governing the people, with little or no recourse possible.

Many of these present Executive branch activities are at core little different from those imposed by a certain British monarch two- and one-half centuries ago. Then, as now, only a small portion of our people seemed fully aware outside their daily lives of the dangers present and the ongoing losses of freedoms and rights. When that small admittedly privileged vanguard of men from many walks of life insisted on their full rights under then ancient British law and tradition, the suppression which erupted upon them and their ideas forged a new alliance among the common people of colonial America. Against the premier world power of its day those Americans persisted in spoken, written, and finally armed empowerment of not only those ancient laws and traditions but also a new recognition of their ultimate meaning, the freedom and equality of each individual, and the subsidiarity of a servile state. Now, according to President Biden, those who chose to actively invoke the full meanings of the Constitution in spoken, written, and voted form are no longer deplorables, but actual enemies of a Democrat-defined democracy.

While I do not like former President Trump, I do like most of his priorities and policies. We are a long-established sovereign nation, without ethnic or racial borders but with definite borders of geography and common belief. Unlike former President Trump, our President Biden has chosen other paths. Borders and beliefs, by oath of the President as Chief Executor of our laws and Commander in Chief of our military forces, must be enforced, but are not. Elections are to be run under the direct supervision and action of State governments, but our President says those same governments cannot be allowed to do so according to the will of their citizens as reflected by their elected representatives. The courts have likewise been allowed to intervene in this well-defined Constitutional process with President Biden's encouragement and assistance. Our President has likewise refused to enforce many other laws despite the rightful demands of citizens. Our President has enabled policies of repression via law, regulation, and censorship of free speech in all venues and sought to punish citizens publicly and privately who in many cases did not engage in violence but simply in peaceful passionate presentation of grievances. Some few of those who allegedly engaged in criminal activity in the January 6th Capitol riot remain jailed under severe circumstances and in many cases without charges or rapid access to the courts, like a domestic Guantanamo. Our President has often served as judge and jury in his public pronouncements regarding those charged with political or criminal acts directly violating our principles of assumed innocence. Our President continues to combine, via Executive Order, treaty, and diplomatic agreements, with other nations and supranational authorities to subject us to jurisdictions, rules, and laws foreign to our Constitution and the laws and traditions of our nation. Those same Executive Orders, seemingly now with force of royal mandate and law, have been used to expand governmental rule over many aspects of our private and personal lives. Our President supports and empowers public, private, and governmental censure of us for pretended offences of newly invented and ever expanding intersectional civil rights while actively seeking new laws and regulations to attain separate and unequal entitlements and privileges for favored subgroups he has chosen. He engages our military forces and monies at his will as mercenaries to his foreign policies while abandoning prior allies to their fate. None of these were Trumpisms; none of these seek to Make America Great Again.

Our President Biden has repeatedly stated that he seeks to be a uniter, a leader, of all the people. However, he limits those people to those who willingly submit to his Democratic socialist globalist agenda. The almost half of the voting population from our last national election are discharged from any concerns, protections, or rights as "MAGA Republicans who are enemies of democracy". As a proud member of our Constitutional Republic, I must count myself amongst them.

GOOD NEWS ABOUT ECONOMIC FREEDOM FOR FORMER COMMUNIST COUNTRIES

BY RICHARD RAHN

The annual Economic Report of the World was just published by the Fraser Institute and a number of other think tanks. The authors of the Report measure economic freedom on a number of dimensions, including the size of government and taxation, legal system and property rights, sound money, freedom to trade internationally, and regulation.

Of the 165 countries measured, the top three were predictable – Hong Kong (1), Singapore (2), and Switzerland (3). And the bottom – Argentina (161), Syria (162), Zimbabwe (163), Sudan (164), and Venezuela (165) – were also predictable, plus economic basket cases like Cuba and North Korea, which lack reliable data for a ranking. (This unfortunately is the last year Hong Kong will be included because the data is pre-PRC economic takeover.)

What was not predictable, and in fact wholly unexpected thirty years ago is that many of the former countries in Eastern Europe that were part of the Soviet Union or under the Soviet thumb have become some of the economically freest and most successful countries.

The seven countries listed above are in the top 20% of the countries of the world in economic freedom. They rank higher than many major countries often considered to be economically free, like Germany, Spain, Sweden, Italy, and France. Most of the other former communist countries, like Poland and Hungary, rank in the top 50% of economic freedom.

As a result of economic freedom, real incomes have also risen rapidly so most are now middle income – which is a sharp change from the poverty that they were mired in during Soviet times. The question is “Why did they do so well?” All had some form of the market economy before they were taken over or dominated by the Soviet Union; and having experienced socialism or communism, they saw its failures on a daily basis. Despite the censorship, most citizens of these countries were well aware that life was getting better and better in Western Europe and the Americas, while their misery continued year after year with little improvement.

When the Iron Curtain fell, most people in the affected countries experienced a sharp drop in their economic well-being, because as bad as socialism was, it did provide a low floor and the new private markets had yet to kick in. But very quickly homegrown and foreign entrepreneurs sensed opportunities and began creating productive enterprises, such as restaurants.

These countries were bankrupt, so most of the regulators and even many tax officials lost their jobs. Thus there was no one to enforce the old regulations, and the new rules were yet to be set, so almost anything was permitted. Estonia was perhaps the best example of rapid constructive change. When the country gained full independence in 1991, its people elected a brilliant young history professor, Mart Laar, who liked to say the only book he had ever read in economics was Milton Friedman’s “Free to Choose.”

Mr. Laar said it sounded good to him so the Estonians went ahead and did it. As expected, the international bureaucrats at the World Bank, IMF, and foreign affairs departments of major countries recommended against going all out for economic freedom. But the new leaders like Mr. Laar understood those organizations were trying to protect their old powers and turf, and hence their advice was properly often ignored.

Having worked in a number of countries in economic transition, I was amazed at how many young economists I met there who had never been out of their home countries had managed to acquire black-market copies of the works of Friedman, Hayek, and other free-market economists. For the most part, they rejected the recommendations of the Keynesians and social democrat economists, because as I was often told, their ideas were too close to the command and control policies of the socialists.

Thomas Jefferson is reported as saying that revolutions every 25 years or so were necessary to maintain liberty. He understood that bureaucracies – even well-intentioned – become stifling and oppressive, and occasionally need to be tossed out and start anew. That is what happened with the former communist and socialist states – the money ran out, and the bureaucrats quit or were fired. The currencies became useless because they were without backing and lacked a tax enforcement police – which meant that the national debts could not be paid and had to be written off.

To this day, many of the former socialist countries have some of the world’s lowest debt-to-GDP ratios and are much more fiscally sound than most of the major countries. During a worldwide financial crisis, they will be the last ones to go bankrupt or resort to hyperinflation (many of them – “been there, done that” – and never again). Most the countries instilled more sensible new tax systems with low-rate or even flat taxes. Bulgaria has a simple 10% flat tax on both corporate and personal income.

The bureaucratic plaque is slowly growing again in many countries, from both domestic pressures for “programs” and from foreign governments and international organizations that are trying to impose freedom-destroying regulations – all in the name of protecting the environment and combatting financial fraud. Restoring economic freedoms may require new revolutions.
